The main candidates contested the election under the concept of the rule of law and a separation of powers. All parties aimed at getting public support in order to obtain the constitutional majority. The opposition consisted of two diverse groupings – the Prosperous Justice Party, or PKS, and the Front Pembela Islam, or FPI. The governing coalition was made up of Parti Keadilan Rakyat (PKR), the National Trust Party (PBN), the Democratic Action Party (DAP) and the United Malays National Organization (UMNO). With the general election of 2008, the incumbent president Megawati Sukarnoputri stepped down after five years of service. The governing coalition disintegrated and ultimately ba244e880a
