Birx, MD, MPH, provided an update to members of the WHO's Global health sector strategies at the Group of Eight (G-8) Health Ministers Summit in New York. She highlighted some significant achievements in the global response to the COVID-19 pandemic, including the first cases of COVID-19 that were not linked to travel. She also reported that a vaccine is on the horizon. Update from the Director-General *What are the latest data on COVID-19? As of May 27, there have been 5 million reported cases of COVID-19 worldwide, including 9,448 deaths. The majority of cases have been in mainland China, where case fatality rate is 3.4% overall, with case fatality rates as high as 25% in severe cases. The virus is spreading at a rate of 3.4% per day, which is lower than the rate of 5% per day at the beginning of the outbreak. Spread of COVID-19 in different regions The vast majority of cases have been reported in China. As of May 27, cases were reported in 167 countries, the majority of which are in Asia. There have been more than 1,700 cases outside mainland China. There has been limited spread outside of Asia, with the highest number of cases in the Middle East and North Africa. Impact of the COVID-19 outbreak on global health systems The spread of the virus has led to disruption of the global health system, including the disruption of routine health care services, the closure of borders, and economic disruption. Health systems in China have been severely strained by the pandemic, including the absence of medical staff and concerns over the safety of health care workers. As of May 27, the WHO has received reports of approximately 40,000 COVID-19-related deaths in hospitals. In addition, China has reported over 80,000 cases of severe illness in health care settings

Friday, July 11, 2010 The Corporate Vodka Factor I had an interesting phone call with Peter Siewe from Drinks Industry Weekly recently. He seemed to have a lot of questions about "corporate" products. "How big are these brands these days?" I responded by pointing out that Coke's "Cola-Z" is not a "brand" and is not used by the company. Instead, it is a labeling. "How are they different from brands?" "They have standardization so they can be easily used in a wide range of beverages." "So the company has standardized the drinking fountain?" "Yes." "Is that the only reason they are drinking fountains?" "The "standardization" concept came from the packaged beverage industry and is now being adopted by the drinking fountain industry." "What about their label?" "It's very simple and can be used on a wide variety of containers." "Does that mean it can be used on all packaging?" "Yes, any container with a drinking fountain (or even a sink faucet) can use the "Cola-Z" label." "Oh, I thought it could only be used on aluminum or plastic." "The definition of a drinking fountain is the container itself." "What about the drinking fountain?" "That also can use the "Cola-Z" label." "So all drinking fountains are drinking fountains?" "Yes, with all the standardization." "What about the 20 oz. plastic bottle they now are starting to use." "That is also an example of the standardization." "How about these cans?" 2d92cc491b
